

FACTSHEET: TRANSITIONING YOUTH WITH A DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITY AND A MENTAL HEALTH DISORDER

DISCLAIMER: Please note programs use varying terminology in describing eligibility for developmental disabilities services. These may include intellectual disability, developmental disability, or specific terminology from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-5). Check with your local developmental disability service to confirm diagnostic eligibility for the program.

WHAT ARE DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES MENTAL HEALTH (DDMH) SERVICES PROGRAMS?

- ▶ Developmental disabilities mental health (DDMH) services programs serve youth aged 14+ (12+ in the Lower Mainland) and adults (aged 19+) who have a diagnosed developmental disability and a mental health disorder.

MY PATIENT IS ALREADY RECEIVING DDMH SERVICES. WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR MENTAL HEALTH SERVICE TRANSITION?

- ▶ DDMH staff will manage transition of mental health services for youth who are receiving DDMH services and require adult mental health services.
- ▶ Most responsible physician (pediatrician or family physician) remains responsible for transfer of other medical care services.
- ▶ See also Services to Adults with Developmental Disabilities \(STADD\) navigator supports, for youth transition support.

HOW CAN MY TRANSITIONING PATIENT ACCESS DDMH AS A NEW PATIENT?

Who Qualifies?

Youth (under age 19)

- ▶ Must have established eligibility for Ministry for Children and Family Development Child and Youth Special Needs (CYSN) program (provides services for youth to age 19) before a referral to DDMH will be generated.

Adults (age 19+)

- ▶ Must have established eligibility for Community Living BC before a referral to a DDMH program can be generated. Community Living BC is the agency that provides services to adults (age 19+) with developmental disabilities. The exception to this rule is the Lower Mainland DDMH program. Individuals living in Lower Mainland communities can be referred to DDMH prior to establishing CLBC eligibility. However, the requirements for service are similar to those needed to establish CLBC eligibility, which include:
 - An IQ below 70
 - An intellectual disability diagnosed prior to age 18
 - A diagnosis of query mental health illness with or without complex behavioural issues

What is the referral process for new patients?

Youth (under age 19)

- ▶ Contact the patient's CYSN worker to discuss a referral to DDMH. Eligibility for CYSN must be established before a referral can be generated.

Adults (age 19+)

- ▶ Contact the patient's CLBC facilitator to discuss a referral to DDMH. Eligibility for CLBC must be established before a referral can be generated. The exception to this rule is the Lower Mainland DDMH program. A referral for eligible individuals can be made directly to the Lower Mainland DDMH program (with the patient's consent) by a pediatrician, a parent, or by CLBC.

Are referred patients automatically accepted into DDMH programs?

Once referrals are received, they are reviewed by the local DDMH team to determine if the referral meets the program mandate. If a referral is not deemed appropriate, a team member may contact the referring party to offer alternative support options for the individual that may be available in the community.
